ADAM BELLOW TO LAUNCH NEW LINE OF POLITICAL AND CURRENT AFFAIRS BOOKS AT ST. MARTIN'S PRESS

New York, NY, October 19, 2016 -- St. Martin's Press is pleased to announce that Adam Bellow will join the company, as the editorial director of a new, to-be-named imprint of political and current affairs books. The imprint will publish books from all sides of the political spectrum and across a range of issues—but its focus will be on discovering a new generation of conservative voices. While most of the imprint's books will be nonfiction, Bellow also will publish selected fiction with political themes and stories.

Bellow commented, "Left and right no longer even speak to one another, let alone debate each other's books. This imprint will seek to revive the culture of intelligent debate, both within the right and between right and left, creating a sense of openness and ferment that will attract the most original and interesting writers and build community through a sense of shared mission and purpose." The imprint will include books acquired by Bellow, as well as titles from other St. Martin's Press editors.

St. Martin's Press editor in chief George Witte said, "We're thrilled to welcome an editor of Adam's stature to St. Martin's. He has articulated a dynamic new direction for both conservative and political publishing, and we look forward to the range of books he will discover here."

Bellow has been vice president and executive editor at Harper Collins and editorial director of Broadside Books, an imprint of Harper Collins. He also has been editorial director of the Free Press/Simon & Schuster and executive editor-at-large at Doubleday/Random House. His acquisitions include the New York Times bestsellers Going Rogue by Sarah Palin, Clinton Cash by Peter Schweizer, A Time for Truth by Senator Ted Cruz, Stealing America by Dinesh D'Souza, Heretic by Ayaan Hirsi Ali, Liberal Fascism by Jonah Goldberg, and The Bell Curve by Charles Murray and Richard J. Herrnstein.

Bellow will begin work at St. Martin's Press on October 24.
